

© Provided by Fortune Cuban sandwich

Bad news for ham lovers who frequent Costco or Sam's Club.

Michelin® Tires Site

 michelinman.com

69300+ followers on Twitter

Ad The Official Michelin Tires Site. Compare Tires & View Tire Dealers.

Find the Right Tire

Search by Vehicle

Locate a Dealer

Search by Tire Size

Washington-based 502 Boundary Blvd., previously called Fletcher's Fine Foods, has recalled 8,694 pounds of "Fletcher's Fine Foods Classics Black Forest Brand Ham with Natural Juices." It comes in a vacuum-sealed package, with "Product of Canada" and "Est. 337" on the label. The packaging code is "16 OC 2016."

The company issued the recall after a customer found "various sized pieces of what appeared to be a rubber material" in their package, according to Consumerist. The USDA then classified it a Class II recall, which means it's a "health hazard situation where there is a remote possibility of adverse health consequences."

Manufacturers use a mixture of hundreds of chemicals to produce rubber products, from tires to gloves. So accidental consumption could risk exposure to those materials. While no injuries have been reported at this time, 502 Boundary Blvd. urges consumers to either dispose of the product or return it to the retailer.

The ham was produced on July 18, 2016, packaged in Ontario, and exported to the U.S. on July 21, 2016 where it was sold at Costco, Sam's Club, and various distribution centers in Alaska, Utah, and Washington.

502 Boundary Blvd. could not immediately be reached for comment.

SPONSORED TOPICS

Best Car Insurance Companies

Thinning Hair Products

Back Pain Treatment

MORE FOR YOU

Sponsored Links by

An Obama Veto Worth Backing

Wall Street Journal

What These 'Little House On The Prairie' Stars Look Like Now is Incredible

RightBrainNews

12 Weirdest Aspects of Japanese Culture That Will Baffle Americans!

Touristate