Indianapolis police are searching for a man who fired shots at his former supervisor in a parking lot of a northwest-side business early Friday.

The suspect fired shots about 6:45 a.m. in the parking lot of BCS Recycling, 7955 Zionsville Road, according to Marion County dispatch.

A bullet grazed the victim, but police said there were no serious injuries.

Employees at the scene told Fox59 that they witnessed the former co-worker shoot at a supervisor.

“It’s scary because what if we would have been here five minutes earlier and everyone would have been inside?” Nikki McCannon told Fox59. “He could have come inside and started laying out bullets inside.”

McCannon told the station that the temporary employee had been fired a few days ago. She said the man pulled into the parking lot and fired at the supervisor’s car while the supervisor was inside.
